HIT & MISS

Journal of the Western Antique Power Associates

KNOTT'S BERRY FARM 2011

WAPA is once again participating at Knott's Berry Farm, after a long hiatus. The show ran from April 16 through April 24, with members displaying their equipment, grinding corn, and educating the public for twelve hours each day.

Knott's does not only allow our club to showcase our hobby to the public, but it is a revenue generator as well. The money we make from this show allows us to pay bills and do fun things for our members.

We all owe a debt of gratitude to all the members who brought out their engines and put in long hours at the show.

CALIFORNIA ANTIQUE FARM EQUIPMENT SHOW – TULARE

Tulare is in the middle of California, an excellent location for attracting collectors from both ends of the state, as well as the Western U.S. I couldn't begin to estimate how many engines and tractors were on display, but the tractor parade must have lasted a couple hours.

It seems that more BIG tractors are coming out, from manufacturers such as Best, Holt, Rumely, Avery, and Aultman & Taylor.

WAPA's was one of the better club displays, and we completely filled up our space. Hopefully we can grab a little more real estate for next year.

This year, the show was officially a three day event: Friday through Sunday. It seemed to work out well, as people always start arriving on Thursday anyway.

In the 10+ years that WAPA has been displaying at Tulare, the surrounding area has really grown, and there are plenty of nice hotels and restaurants to make the show an enjoyable experience.

Clarification!

After last month's issue, I received a call from Merle Morse, former machine shop instructor and machinist extraordinaire.

Merle suggested that I clarify the advise to "close" the regulators when stopping a welding project.

"Closing" a regulator means "turning the knob counterclockwise" until no tension is felt on the knob.

Turning the knob too far clockwise will damage the regulator diaphragm and perhaps allow gas pressures to rise to dangerous levels.
